Reflections on Steve Jobs' Three Pieces of Advice

"You can't connect the dots looking forward. You can only connect them looking backwards. So you have to trust that the dots will connect in the future. You have to trust in something - your gut, destiny, life, karma, whatever."

Think of a time when you've been able to look back and connect dots in the past that previously didn't make sense. Describe that scenario. What did you learn from it? Also, do you trust in something or someone? Do you have some level of comfort that your life is headed in the right direction?

"Sometimes life will head you in the head with a brick. Don't lose faith. You've got to find what you love. If you haven't found it yet, keep looking, and don't settle."

Have you already discovered something that you love? Something that might lead to a profession? What is it? If not, don't worry! You have plenty of time. What are some ways you can look for something you love?

“Death is life’s best invention. Your time is limited, so don’t waste it living someone else’s life.”

This is the second time in two weeks someone has told you not to waste time. Now I’m telling you: Don’t waste time. Time is the ultimate unknown, and since none of us know how much longer we have on Earth, it’s good to have a few goals and dreams. On the lines below, write your Bucket List. Write down everything you want to do and experience before your time is up.
